About the BDMP

Hybrid Edition

The BDMP's digital component offers a scholarly edition of the extant manuscripts of Beckett's works, while its printed component offers an analysis of those works' geneses

Module 1

This module combines Beckett's manuscripts of the late short prose text Stirrings Still / Soubresauts with those of his last poem Comment dire / what is the word

Genetic Edition

Each component of the BDMP's modules either tries to expose (digital) or analyse (printed) the writing process behind Samuel Beckett's works

Module 2

This module presents the manuscripts of Beckett's novel L'Innommable / The Unnamable.

New and Improved Features

Writing Tools

This tool now renders text in its original colour, including single strikethroughs or highlights

Sentence Numbers

Sentence numbers are now visible in all views, thus exposing our versioning mechanism and improving citability

New Highlight Values

Text that is encircled, boxed, or connected in the MS is now rendered as such in the transcription as well

Subsentences

The longest sentences in The Unnamable have been divided into 'subsences' to optimise versioning in the Synoptic Sentence View

Doodles

Doodles and their descriptions can now also be displayed in the Text View

Linked Search

Searched phrases automatically link back to manuscript zones

CollateX

CollateX has been fully integrated into the edition, to allow for the collation of top layer renditions of sentence versions

Suggested Search

Users can now also search for gaps left by the author, that may indicate moments of hesitation during the writing process
